Died. In the seventy first year of her age, at Philadelphia, whither in compliance with importunate solicitations of her friends, anxious for the preservation of so valuable a life, she had gone for the recovery of her health, Mrs. Elizabeth Pinckney, the amiable relict of the honorable colonel Charles Pinckney, formerly so eminent at the bar, on the judiciary bench, and in the legislature of this country; and mother of brigadier general Pinckney, and of Mr. Pinckney, the present minister of the United States of America, at the court of Great-Britain. This all accomplished lady, possessed, in a most eminent degree, all the amiable and engaging qualities, united to all the virtues and graces, which embellish and exalt the female character.—Her manners had been so refined, by a long and intimate acquaintance with the polite world, her countenance was so dignified by serious contemplation and devout reflection, and so replete with all that mildness and complacency which are the natural results of a regular uninterrupted habit and practice of virtue and benevolence that it was scarcely to behold her without emotions of the highest veneration and respect. Her understanding, aided by an uncommon strength of memory, had been so highly cultivated and improved by travel and extensive reading, and was so richly furnished, as well with scientific, as practical knowledge, that her talent for conversation was unrivalled, and her company was sedulously sought after by all, without distinction of age or sex, who could be so happy as to gain admission into it. Her religion was rational, liberal, and pure. The source of it was seated in the judgement and the heart, and from thence issued a life, regular, placid, and uniform.

² Eliza Lucas, who first introduced the cultivation of indigo in this State.

“Mild as the blest above, without serene
As Eden’s air, and calm as heaven within.”

In a word, her whole life was like the Milky way with stars, thick-set with the genuine fruits of sincere piety and active benevolence. The natural consequence of such a life was, that she met death in the midst the most excruciating pain, with a truly Christian fortitude, and a Heaven born tranquility.

“She taught us how to live, and, oh too high
A price for knowledge! taught us how to die.”

(Wednesday, July 17, 1793.)

Died. In Laurens county, on the 16th day of June, in the 19th year of her age, Miss Jane Hunter, eldest daughter of the honorable John Hunter Esq. This youthful lady is much regretted by her relations and friends, and all those that had the pleasure of her acquaintance. (Friday, July 19, 1793.)

Married On Monday last, two celebrated widows, ladies of America and France, after having repudiated their husbands on account of their ill treatment, conceived the design of living together in the strictest union and friendship; the said amiable ladies, in order to give a pledge of their fidelity, requested that their striped gowns should be pinned together, that their children should be looked upon as one family, while their mothers showed them an equal affection. Mr. Lee officiated with dignity as their proxy, and explained the reciprocal obligations these two ladies promised to confer on each other, inviting their children at the same time to imitate their mothers; Mr. Samuel Prioleau acted as the sponsor of the American lady, with that dignity, which such a deserving ward required; Mr. Huger, Ramsay, and Burke, three of her faithful guardians, assisted at the feast on this occasion. The brave artillery signed that contract by the fire of their guns, and all their brothers in arms by thousands of huzzas; the merry guests waited for his excellency in an anxious solicitude, they lamented his absence, but they rested assured of his patriotism; the representative of the gallic lady, M. A. B. Mangourit, was so feelingly touched at this so noble a scene, that while his eyes overflowed with tears of joy, he only lamented the absence of the president and all those of his colleagues that are true friends to those ladies, to join with the French Americans to celebrate the Carmagnole and sing Ca Ira. (Saturday, July 20, 1793.)
